SECTION MEN MEET DEATH IN FOG BANK

One Man Killed on St. Paul
Tracks and Another on
Soo Line

TWO OTHERS ESCAPE DEATH

When the fog bank settled down on Lake county New Year's morning, making travel on both land and sea especially dangerous, Peter Anderson, section foreman in the employ of the St. Paul railroad at Russell, decided that New Year's morn was the morning of all days to go out and examine the steel rails of the company in whose employ he had worked 15 years. He procured a speeder—a hand cart driven by a small gasoline engine—and started south from Russell to examine rails, switches and signaling devices. He had not driven his cart five miles when the front of the monster of the rails appeared within 20 feet of his machine. He applied the brakes, but too late. The big locomotive struck the speeder, crushing it to bits, and burying machine and man under its enormous weight. Anderson's body was, literally speaking, cut to pieces. The engineer applied the brakes, brought his train to a stop, and made an investigation to ascertain whether the occupants of the speeder had been killed or injured. When he found that the machine operator had been instantly killed, he drove his train into Russell, made his report, then continued on his way. At the inquest it was proven that he did everything in his power to avoid killing the section foreman.

An hour after Anderson met death another section hand was killed on a different railroad and many miles from the scene of the first accident.

Late New Year's day, Lawrence Skulski, employed as section foreman by the Soo line at Prairie View, ordered his two assistants to prepare the speeder for a trip over the division. The two men got the machine ready, then the foreman jumped to the drivers seat, and the little "go-devil," as it is known among railroad men, raced south over the slippery and fog-hidden rails. The men had proceeded but a couple of miles when one of them was heard to shout:

"Look!"

Within 30 feet of them, on the same rails, a big locomotive pulling the fast merchandise train out of Chicago appeared. It was running close to 40 miles an hour. The speeder was running 20 miles an hour.

"Jump for your lives!" shouted the foreman, as he slipped from the speeder. Alfie Lalie, complied with his instruction and jumped to safety. Both men were badly bruised, but were able to resume their work Monday.

Sam Dale, who was riding on the rear end of the speeder did not jump, but clung to the speeder as it raced head-on into the locomotive. He was ground to death under the wheels of the big engine. One of the witnesses of the accident believes that Dale did not hear the warning about of his foreman. Another believes that he heard the cry of danger but was too frightened to move.

Firemen's Mask Ball, January 12

The firemen are planning to give an up-to-date first class mask ball on Wednesday evening, Jan. 12, in the Antioch opera house. Hanneman's orchestra will furnish the music for the occasion. The supper will be one of the features of the evening, being in the hands of the ladies of Antioch. A costume of Chicago will be on hand with the best of attire. Automobiles will be taken care of at the garage. Tickets, including supper, are $1.00 per couple. The firemen will do their share to entertain and will spend a good sum of money in prizes. So all they ask is to come and make a lively crowd and have a good time, this means old and young for the old can dance all the old fashioned dances as well as the young can dance the tango and hesitation.

Peculiar Mexican Tree.

In Mexico there grows a tree called the "tree of little hands." It is this called owing to the fact that its five peculiarly curved branches look like the fingers of a child.

Rev. White is Married

On New Year's day Rev. Edward S. White and Miss Lilah McCormick both of Libertyville were united in marriage in the St. Lawrence Episcopal church, the church of which the bridegroom is pastor. At this wedding three pastors officiated and a fourth acted as best man. Rev. ### Nature's Equalization.

A peculiarity of deaf cats is that they seem to have a very great sense of feeling in their feet pads. It is almost an impossibility for a heavy animal to approach a deaf cat from behind without giving it warning and this may be attributed to the extreme sensitiveness of the cat's feet recording the slightest tremor of the ground.

WOUND ON SHAFT; MAN MET DEATH

Geo. Haggerty of Wadsworth
Was Killed While Oiling
Machinery

WORKED AT ARCADEY MILL

George Haggerty, aged 20, residing with his mother, Mrs. John Haggerty, one and a half miles northwest of Wadsworth, was almost instantly killed Sunday morning at 9 o'clock when he was wound around a steel shaft at the plant of the Arcadey Milling company at Roundout. Haggerty was employed as an oiler and it was while applying oil to the shafting that the accident took place.

His coat sleeve caught in a set-screw in the shafting. The next moment he was jerked from his feet and his body was whirling around the rapidly revolving shaft. The bones in one arm were broken in several places.

It is thought the victim's neck was broken when he was hurled against the ceiling.

Fellow employees did not witness the accident and did not hear any outcry. They arrived on the scene shortly after the accident must have happened. The power was shut off and the body was unwound from shaft. An examination showed the victim was dead. The news was conveyed to his mother who was prostrated.

Fate has not been kind to her. Barely ten years ago, Margaret Haggerty, a daughter died. A year later John Haggerty, the husband, became mentally deranged and was removed to Elgin. Barely a year after that, Mamie Haggerty, another daughter was operated on for appendicitis. The same evening she was carried home dead. Now this tragedy, coming on top of the others, is almost more than Mrs. Haggerty can bear.

Besides his mother, Geo. Haggerty leaves two brothers and a younger sister who lives at home, also a married sister at Libertyville. The inquest was held Sunday afternoon.

A verdict in accordance with the facts was returned by the jury at the inquest after the evidence has been heard. The verdict was open, so far as any liability was concerned. Immediately after the inquest the body was removed to the White and Tobin undertaking rooms where it was prepared for burial.

Fox Lake Parties Seek Divorce

Charging extreme and repeated cruelty, Mrs. Jennie Witt of Fox Lake, through Attorney Welch, has filed a bill for divorce against her husband, Louis Witt. According to the charges in the bill Witt struck his wife violently in the face and pulled her hair on Sept. 15, 1915.

On Oct. 25, 1915, she says, he struck her in the face with his hand, inflicting a painful wound. She says he now threatens to take their only child away by force. Mrs. Witt sets out that her husband owns the household furniture on an estate three miles from Fox Lake. She says he works as caretaker of this estate, earning $60 a month, getting his rent free. She says he has about $700 in the Lake Villa Trust and Savings bank and she fears he will withdraw it.

Local Couple Married in Waukegan

On Tuesday afternoon in the M. E. parsonage at Waukegan occurred the marriage of Miss Villa Larson and Horace J. Kick, both of this place. The bride has made this village her home for more than a year and the groom has been employed hereabouts for some time and both young people have a large circle of friends here who wish them a long and happy wedded life. We understand they are to make their home near Zion City.

Perfume.

Ever since the days of Plato, philosophers have been studying the various phenomena and the esoteric meanings of perfumes, and over the ages several thousands of years before Plato's day, women of the Orient have practiced various tricks of perfume which they could never have explained by the principles of psychology.

FIRST MOVE TOWARDS SEWERAGE TAKEN BY BOARD

At the regular meeting of the Village Board last Tuesday evening, the question of installing a sewerage system in the Village, was brought up and discussed at considerable length. H. L. Emerson, consulting engineer from Chicago was present and gave a very interesting talk on the subject. A motion was made, seconded and carried authorizing Mr. Emerson to make a topography survey and get out a map of the village.

This is a move in the right direction and is one of the first steps that must be taken before anything definite can be done.

The Board of Local Improvements organized and Elmer Brook was elected secretary.

The sentiment of the town is in favor of a system of this kind and every step no matter how small taken toward its accomplishment brings us just that much nearer the realization of our hopes and every move of the village board will now be watched and commented upon, by those against it they will be condemned, by those in favor commended, but if their labors are directed for the good of the village and are in accordance with the wishes of the majority, a few knooks from the opposition won't "cut much ice."

Fears Husband Will Kill Her

Charging cruelty, Henrietta Horton, through her attorney, Elmer V. Orvis, has brought suit in circuit court for a divorce from her husband, Earl Horton. She also asked that an injunction be issued enjoining her husband from disposing of any property, whether real or personal and from carrying out his threats to steal their one child, Raymond, age 11 months. They were married at Antioch on August 12, 1913. She also claims that he has neglected to provide her and their child with the necessities of life.

That on December 13, 1915, she day she left his home, he knocked her down, raised her up, and then threw her violently to the floor and otherwise abused, beat and pushed her so she was afraid of her life. She claims that he forced her to leave his house and board.

Overcoming Insomnia.

Sometimes repeating rhymes and jingles, taking full, deep breaths between words or lines, will hasten sleep; or lying in a certain position may work in other cases. One man can always sleep if he lies on his left side and reads for a few minutes. Many people try the reading plan, but reading in bed is not hygienic and it is better to form some other good-to-sleep habit.—Good Health.

To Clean Mother-of-Pearl.

Handles of mother-of-pearl or other articles of the same material may be restored by cleaning with pure olive oil and rubbing with a nail brush, followed by a rubbing with a piece of chamola.

"Doing" the Art Museum.

A drawing in Life represented two young women in an art museum standing before the Laocoon group while one remarks: "I can see that they are firemen, all right, but I don't see why they got so tangled up in the hose."

GRAYSLAKE PREACHERS RESIGN

Last week's issue of the Grayslake Times contained this heading "Are Grayslake Preachers on a Walkout?" and upon reading the article one would be led to believe that they are. On the same Sunday Rev. Miller, of the Congregational church, formally announced his resignation stating in no uncertain terms that he no longer preach to empty pews. This was going on in the Congregational church, Rev. Blaisdell pastor of the M. E. church, was handing in his resignation, his reason being that he wished to accept a call from his former conference in Pennsylvania. The article in question ends up with the following paragraph:

Is the rural church passing? Are the days of good old-fashioned religion a thing of the past? Many students of religion claim that the decline of the country church began when the pulpits were thrown open to the politicians—when the ministers attempted to dictate political elections—when the church became a political forum.

Men go to church to be told of God and spiritual matters. They want to pray, to put their house in order, to hesitate in the mad rush for the necessities and luxuries in life, to think of the future life.

Enemy of the Fern.

One of the worst enemies of ferns is the mealy bug. This white, woolly insect that clings to the bottom of the fronds. There is reason to suspect that once the plant should be examined every day and all insects removed with a splinter or toothpick. If infestation is bad, the whole top of the fern can be cut off to within an inch of the ground and then allow to grow again after all the insects have been exterminated.

Success in Perseverance.

Inventions appear to be a case "try, try again." No doubt Robert Fulton thought this when he one morning and learned that his first steamboat had gone rapidly as a rocket but he began his "try again" at last, when the "try again" from New York to New Orleans in 32 hours, showed a great success, and he could imagine it for rapidly.

TRADE REVIVAL IN WESTERN CANADA

Not a Myth but an Actuality
Shown in the Returns of Agricultural Statistics and Every Department of Trade and Commerce.

The trade revival in Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta is an actuality and not a myth. There is today a spirit of optimism in the air, just as two years ago there prevailed the opposite spirit of pessimism.

A general trade revival has been felt in every department of business in the Prairie Provinces. The agriculturalists are in better shape than they have ever been before in their lives. No farmers of any country are in better financial condition and in a more general state of prosperity than are the farmers of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta. The farmers have harvested a record crop—a crop which enriches them to the extent of something over $400,000,000.

In the cities the prosperity of the country has been reflected. Everywhere business is on the hustle. The wholesalers and the retailers and the implement dealers find business good. The banks and other collection houses find collections satisfactory, and financial men declare that westerners are paying up their debts. In Winnipeg the bank clearings have been the largest in history, exceeding for one week the figures of Montreal and Toronto. The grain shipments have been the biggest in the history of Winnipeg and in the history of the twin ports, Fort William and Port Arthur. The money order houses have had a big year, the rush of fall orders exceeding all previous years and taxing the capacity of those establishments, whose most sanguine expectations have been exceeded by the actual business done.

The tide has turned in western Canada. The people of the West are forging ahead, forging ahead in actual production and in creation of wealth, giving generously to charitable and other funds, paying up their back debts, while going along carefully regarding any creation of new debts. They are economizing but not scrim-

The financial heads of eastern Canada, acting cautiously but not miserably, are not so sure of the future of the United States and of Europe as the financial heads of western Canada. The financial heads of western Canada are no longer effrighted western Canadians, rather they are instantly offered their praise and their compliments. The financial press recognizes that the tide has turned in western Canada and it has been published to the world.

The condition of western Canada at the close of 1915 is one of optimism and prosperity, backed by the same determination of western people to gain increasing their productiveness as maintaining the records which they have already established.

The trade revival of western Canada is the happiest feature in the business survey of the whole Dominion for 1915 and in the outlook for 1916,—Advertisement.

The land in Egypt for the sale of manufactured tobacco other than pipes would hardly warrant its manufacture there on a large scale. The land smokes cigarettes and tobacco, which is a mixture of tobacco and other ingredients, and is smoked in the water pipe. A total snowfall of 183 inches has been recorded in a single winter at Summit, Cal., while as much as 307 inches has been on the ground at one time at the same station. As this now furnishes most of the water used in irrigation, hydraulic mining and other phases of engineering, the question of snow depth is of much importance in forecasting the amount of water available for such purposes.—United States Department Circular.

To Clean Tapestries.

Pour boiling water over a handful or two of bran. Let it stand until tepid, and then plunge the tapestries into it. Use no soap and do not rub, but just shake the goods up and down in the liquid. Wring them out, rinse well in tepid water and hang out in the wind. When dry, shake them well to remove the particles of bran.

Light Repels Mosquitoes.

According to a suburban resident of New York city, red glass or red dipped incandescent lamps do not attract mosquitoes in the way that the ordinary white light does. By installing low candlepower red lamps on porches where only general illumination is necessary, it is said that persons may enjoy comparative immunity from mosquitoes, just as if no lamps were used.

What the Fishes Can See.
Fishes can distinguish one color from another and can even distinguish between different shades of the same color. This has been proved by a long series of experiments upon gobies and sticklebacks, undertaken by Mlle. ## The Tender Man Is to His Name

By J. R. HAMILTON
Former Advertising Manager of Wanamakers, Philadelphia

Wherever you find a good name you will find some man trying to live up to it. Character follows reputation far more quickly than reputation follows character. No one ever lost his good name except through folly.

What the world thinks of a man is the very best moral tonic that is sold under the label of philosophy.

And it is the same with merchandise as it is with men. The nameless thing is dreaded everywhere, while the thing with a good name is usually good because you expect it to be.

Men grow proud of their products. You will find a manufacturer saying, "This shoe has got to be good because it bears my name." You will find a canner saying, "I cannot use lye any more than I can tell a lie." You will find a clothing manufacturer saying, "If I am 'all wool,' my clothing must also be all wool."

And so it goes with every single product that carries a brand or a name. Whenever a man sets a standard, he strives to live up to it; and whenever the world sets that standard, he doubles the effort.

Which simply means, if you want the best, you must ask for the best. And every time you ask, you make it better.

There is hardly one of you readers who does not know the name of every good product on the market. From clothing to sugar and from hosiery to baking powder some good name is indelibly fixed in your mind, yet, when you ask for an article, most of the time you do not use that name.

And every time you fail to do so, you discourage the maker, you lower the standard for yourself and you allow some inferior thing to gain in strength and capacity.

Let this go home in your mind: You set the standard of merchandise. The maker follows your ideals. Adulterations creep in through your laxity. Whenever you ask for any old thing, you get it.

While you are reading the advertising news in this paper today, make up your mind to ask only for what you know to be good; to learn what is best and demand it and to have no parley with the nameless things of trade.

SYNOPSIS.

A vestry meeting of the Market Square church. Gail Sargent tells Rev. Smith Boyd that Market Square church is apparently a lucrative business enterprise. Allison takes Gail riding in his motor car. She finds cold disapproval in the eyes of Rev. Smith Boyd. Allison starts a campaign for consolidation and control of the entire transportation system of the world. Gail becomes popular. Allison gains control of transcontinental railroads and arranges to absorb the Vedder court tenement property of Market Square church. Gail tells Boyd that the cathedral Market Square church proposes to build will be out of profits from equator. At a meeting of the seven financial magnates of the country, Allison organizes the International Transportation company. Rev. Smith Boyd undertakes Gail's spiritual instruction and Gail unconsciously gives Allison a hint that solves the Vedder court problem for him. On an inspection trip to Allison's new subway tunnel system, Gail goes back to her home in the West. Her friends here and Arly back to New York. In the midst of a struggle with the forces of humanity in Vedder court, Smith Boyd suddenly finds that he is a real living and loving man. He proposes to Gail but, on the verge of acceptance, she remembers their religious differences and refuses.

CHAPTER XVII.

The Public Is Aroused.

Clad in her filmy cream lace gown, Gail walked slowly into her boudoir, and closed the door, and sank upon her divan. She did not stop tonight to let down her hair and change to her slippers, nor to put on her nightgown. She sat there, looking straight at the beautiful green light, instead, with all the electric bulbs blazing, she sat with her chin in her hand, and, with her body perfectly in repose, tried to study the whirl of her mind.

She was shaken, she knew that, shaken and altered as she had never been before. Something in the depths of her had leaped up into life, and cried out in agony, and would not stop crying until it was satisfied.

"I need you to walk hand in hand with me about the greatest work in the world!" That was it; the greatest work in the world! And what was that work? To live and teach ritual in places of religion; to turn worship into a social observance; to use help less belief as a ladder of ambition; to reduce faith to words, and hope to a recitation, and charity to an obligation; to make pomp and ceremony a substitute for conscience, and to interpose a secretary between the human heart and God!

For just an instant Gail's eyelids dropped, her long brown lashes curved upon her cheeks, while beneath them her eyes glinted, and a smile touched the corners of her lips; then she was serious again. No, she had decided wisely.

There was a knock on the door, and Gail smiled again as she said:

"Come in."

Mrs. Helen Davies entered, tall and stately in her boudoir frills and ruffles. She sat down in front of Gail and prepared to enact the role of conscientious mother.

"Doctor Boyd proposed to you tonight," she charged, with affectionate authority.

"Yes, Aunt Helen," and Gail began to pull pins out of her hair.

A worried expression crossed the brow of Aunt Helen.

"Did you accept him?" and she fairly quivered with anxiety.

"No, Aunt Helen." Quite calmly, piling more hairpins and still more into the little tray by her side, and shaking down her rippling waves of hair.

Aunt Helen sighed a deep sigh of relief, and smiled her approval.

"Gail, dear, you have shown a degree of carefulness which I am delighted to find in you. If you handle all your affairs so sensibly, you have a brilliant future before you."

"I must be an awful worry to you, Aunt Helen," observed Gail, and walking over, she slipped her arm around Mrs. Davies' neck and kissed her and looked around for her chocolate box.

Gail's maid came in, and Mrs. Davies bade her sister's niece good-nights most cordially, and retired with a great load off her mind; and half an hour later the lights in Gail's pretty little suite went out.

As she lay long hours looking out at the pale stars; if, in the midst of her calm logic, she suddenly heard her face in her pillows and sobbed silently; if, toward morning, she awoke with a little cry to find her face and her hands hot, all these things were but normal and natural. It is enough to know that she came to her breakfast bright-eyed and rosy-cheeked and smiling with the pleasant greetings of the day, and picked up the papers casually, and lit upon the newest sensation of the free and entirely uncurbed metropolis press!

The free and entirely uncurbed metropolis press had found Vedder court, and had made it the sudden focus of the public eye. Those few who were privileged to know intimately the workings of that adroit master of the public welfare, Tim Carman, could have recognized clearly the fine hand in the blaze of notoriety which obscure Vedder court had suddenly received. After having considered the commotion and content of the Market Square church tenements for so many years, the city had, all at once, discovered that the condition was unbearable! The free and entirely uncurbed metropolis press had taken up, with great enthusiasm, the work of poking the finger of scorn at Vedder court. It had published photographs of the disreputable old sets of buildings, and where they did not seem to drip enough, the artists had retouched them. It had sent budding young Poes and Dickens down there to write up the place. It had sent the sob sisters there in shoals to interview the downtrodden, and, above all things, it had put prominently before the public eye the immense profit which Market Square church wrung from this organized misery!

Gail turned sick at heart as she read. Uncle Jim permitted four morning papers to come to the house, and the dripping details, with many variations, were in all of them. She glanced over toward the rectory and the dignified old church standing beyond it, with mingled indignation and humiliation. A sort of ignominy seemed to have descended upon it, like a man whose features seem coarsened from the instant he is doomed to wear prison stripes; and the fact which she particularly resented was that a portion of the disgrace of Market Square church seemed to have descended upon her. She could not make out why this should be; but it was Aunt Grace Sargent, bustling about to see that Gail was supplied with more kinds of delicacies than she could possibly sample, saw that unmistakable look of distress on Gail's face, and went straight up to her sister Helen, the creases of worry deep in her brow.

Mrs. Helen Davies was having her coffee in bed, and she continued that absorbing ceremony while she considered her sister's news.

"I did not think that Gail was so deeply affected by the occurrences of last night," she mused; "but of course she could not sleep, and she's full of sympathy this morning, and afraid that maybe she made a mistake, and feels perfectly wretched."

Grace Sargent sat right down.

"Did the doctor propose?" she breathlessly inquired.

Mrs. Davies poured herself some more hot coffee, and added:

"She refused him."

"Oh!" and acute distress settled on Grace Sargent's brow, with such a firm clutch that it threatened to homestead the location. Mrs. Sargent shared the belief of Rev. Smith Boyd's mother, that Smith Boyd was the finest young man in the world; and Gail's aunt was speechless with dismay and disappointment.

"I have ceased to worry about Gail's future," went on Mrs. Davies complacently. "It is her present condition about which I am most concerned. She is so conscientious and self-analytical that she may distress herself over this affair, and I must get in Arly and Lucille, and plan a series of gayeties which will keep her mind occupied from morning until night."

In consequence of this kindly decision, Gail was plunged into gaiety until she loathed the serape of a violin! The mere fact that she had no time to think did not remove the fact that she had a great deal to think about, and the gaiety only added dizziness to her troubled burden.

Meanwhile, the free and entirely uncurbed metropolis press went on, inch by inch, with its righteous Vedder court crusade, until it had the public indignation properly aroused. The public indignation rose to such a pitch that, if the public had not been busy with affairs of its own, and if it had not been in the habit of leaving everything to be seen to by the people financially interested, and if it had not consisted chiefly of a few active voiced cords, there is not the slightest doubt, it is worth repeating, that the public might have done something about Vedder court! As things were, it grew most satisfactorily indignant. It talked of nothing else, in the subways and on the "L's" and on the surface lines, and on the elderly computer trains; and on the third day of the agitation, before something else should happen to shake the populace to the very foundation of its being, the city authorities condemned the Vedder court property as unsanitary, inhuman and unsafe, as a menace to the public morals, health and life, and as a blot upon civilization; this last being a fancy touch added by Tim Carman himself, who, in his old age, had a tendency to link poetry to his practicality. In consequence of this decision, the city authorities ordered Vedder court to be forthwith torn down, demolished and removed from the face of the earth; thereby justifying, after all, the existence of the free and entirely uncurbed metropolis press! The exact psychological moment had been chosen. The public, caught at the very height of its frenzy, applauded, and ate its dinner in virtuous satisfaction; and Gail Sargent's distress crystallized into a much easier thing to handle; just plain anger!

And so Market Square church had persisted in clutching its greedy hold on a commercial advantage so vile that even a notoriously corrupt city government had ordered it destroyed! Her mind was immensely relieved about Rev. Smith Boyd. She had chosen well and wisely!

CHAPTER XVIII.

Rev. Smith Boyd Protests.

The doves which in summer flitted about the quiet little vestry yard, and cooed over the vestry door, would have flown away had they been at home; for it was a stormy affair, with loud voices and clashing wills and a general atmosphere of tenacity, which was somewhat at variance with the red-robed figure of the Good Shepherd in the pointed window of the vestry. The late arrival was Joseph G. Clark, and his eye sought that of Banker Chisholm, before he nodded to the others and took his seat at the Gothic table.

Rev. Smith Boyd, who was particularly straight and tall today, and particularly in earnest, paused long enough for the slight disturbance to subside, and then he flushed his speech.

"That is my unalterable position in the matter," he declared. "If Market Square church has a mission, it is the responsibility for those miserable human wretches whom we have made our wards."

"We can't feed and clothe them," objected Banker Chisholm, whose white mutton chops already glowed pink from the anger-reddeened skin beneath.

"It doesn't pay to pauperize the people," supplemented Willis Cunningham, stroking his sparse Van Dyke complacently. Cunningham, whose sole relationship to economics consisted in permitting his secretary to sign checks, had labored a few principles which sufficed for all occasions.

"I do not wish to pauperize them," returned the rector. "I am willing to accept the shame of having the city show Market Square church its duty, in exchange for the pleasure of replacing the foul tenements in Vedder court with clean ones."

Joseph G. Clark glanced again at Chisholm.

"They'd be dirty again in ten years," he observed. "If we build the new type of sanitary tenement we shall have to charge more rent, or we can't get more rent because the people who would pay it will not come into that neighborhood."

"Are we compelled to make a profit?" related the rector. "Is it necessary for Market Square church to remain perpetually a commercial landlord?"

The vestry gazed at Rev. Smith Boyd in surprised disapproval. Their previous rector had talked like that, and Rev. Smith Boyd had been a great relief.

"So long as the church has property at all, it will meet with that persistent charge," argued Chisholm. "It seems to me that we have had enough of it. My own inclination would be to sell the property outright, and take up slower, but less personal, forms of investment."

Old Nicholas Van Ploon, sitting far enough away to fold his hands comfortably across his tight vest, screwed his neck around so that he could glare at the banker.

"No," he objected; for the Van Ploon millions had been accumulated by the growth of tall office buildings out of a worthless Manhattan swamp.

"We should cover sell the property," "There are a dozen arguments against keeping it," returned the usual voice of old Joseph G. Clark. "The chief one is the necessity of making a large investment in these new tenements."

Rev. Smith Boyd rose again, shutting the light from the red robe of the Good Shepherd out of quietly concentrated Jim Sargent's eyes.

"I object to this entire discussion," he stated. "We have a moral obligation which forbids us to discuss matters of investment and profit within these walls as if we were a lay trust. We have neglected our moral obligation in Vedder court, until we are as blacklegged with sin as the thief on the cross."

Shrewd old Rufus Manning looked at the young rector curiously. He was puzzled over the change in him.

"Don't swing the pendulum too far, Doctor Boyd," Manning reminded him, with a great deal of kindness. These two had met often in Vedder court. "Our sins, such as they are, are no more passive than active."

It was, of course, old Nicholas Van Ploon who fell back again on the stock argument which had been null and void to soothe his conscience for all these years.

"We give these people cheaper rent than they can find anywhere in the city."

"We should continue to do so, but in cleaner and more wholesome quarters," quickly returned the rector.

"This is the home of all these poverty-stricken people whom Market Square church has taken under its shelter, and we have no right to dispose of it."

"That's what I say," and Nicholas Van Ploon nodded his round head. "We should not sell the property."

"We cannot for shame, if for nothing else," argued the rector, seizing on every point of vantage to support his intense desire to lift the Vedder court dwellers from the depth of their degradation.

"We do not now under the disgrace of having owned property so filthy that the city was compelled to order it torn down. The only way in which we can redeem the reputation of Market Square church is to replace those tenements with better ones, and "I don't dispute that, but in that offer I allowed you for the income-earning capacity of your improved property. Since that capacity is stopped, I don't feel obliged to pay you for it, or, in other words, to make up to you the loss which the city has compelled you to sustain."

"There is some show of reason in what Allison says," observed Joseph G. Clark.

Chisholm leaned forward, with his elbows on the table, around the edge of which were carved the heads of winged cherubs.

"What is your present offer?"

"Twenty-five million; cash."

"We refuse!" announced Nicholas Van Ploon, bobbing his round head emphatically.

"I'm not so sure that we do," returned Clark. "I have been studying property values in that neighborhood, and I doubt if we can obtain more."

"Then we don't sell!" insisted Nicholas Van Ploon.

"I sincerely think we wish to take up this discussion with Mr. Allison until we have digested the offer," observed the quiet voice of Manning, and, on this hint, Allison withdrew.

He smiled as he heard the voices which broke out in controversy the moment he had closed the door behind him. Being so near, he naturally called on Gail Sargent, and found her entertaining a little tea party of the gayest and brightest when Aunt Helen Davies could bring together.

She came into the little reception "cozy" to meet Allison, smiling with pleasure. There seemed to be a degree of wistfulness in her greeting of her friends since the night of her return.

"Of course I couldn't overlook an opportunity to drop in," said Allison, shaking her by both hands, and holding them while he surveyed her critically. There was a tremendous content in his strength.

"So you only called because you were in the neighborhood," laughed Gail.

"Gailty," he laughed. "I've just been paying attention to my religious duties."

"I wasn't aware that you knew you had any," returned Gail, sitting in the shadow of the window jamb. Allison's eyes were too searching.

TIN HAT IS INNOVATION

Designer Pats Forth Many Reasons Why It Should Be Accepted as an Article of Attire.

The latest innovation in men's apparel has been sprung by W. H. Whitting of Jonesboro, Me. It is a tin hat, with a band made of copper. He fashioned the natty headpiece himself. It is not only very light in weight, but he claims that it is cheaper than a straw "boater," lasts longer and is absolutely rainproof.

Whitting's tin hat has a luster all its own, something that takes the shine off all other hats. It is more showy than Mambrino's helmet, made famous by Don Quixote. Whitting's hat is made of tin, common sheet tin, the same kind of the thin baked bean and sardines and tomatoes are put in.

It is built on a 1915 model and no fashionable youth of the town can "put anything over" on him in the matter of style. It is neat, but not gaudy, a tin body with a copper band, not quite as brilliant as a ribbon with college colors, but more substantial and quite as attractive. At least, it attracts plenty of attention when Whitting wears it on the streets.

BUYS DOG TO RECOVER RING

Man Kills Animal and Finds His $200 Gem In Stomach, as He Had Suspected.

While William A. Thompson was trying to drive a pup away from him the animal closed on his fingers and pulled off and swallowed a $200 diamond ring. Mr. Thompson was not certain what had become of the ring, but when he failed to find it he suspected the dog. He bought the animal, nominally a ten-cent pup, from H. R. Rogers, the negro owner, for $10, after much parley, took the dog home, killed him and found the diamond ring in his stomach.

He was luckier than a man in a neighboring town who owned a valuable vase, a family heirloom. His dog poked his head into the neck of the vase and it stuck. The owner cut off the dog's head to save the vase and then had to break the vase to get out the dog's head to bury it.—Beekley (W. Va.) Dispatch to New York World.

Mobilizing Brains.

Some world-famous names appear on the list of the consulting panel which has been added to the inventions board. Sir William Crookes, O. M., discovered thallium and invented the radiometer, among other valuable services to science, and has written books on such diverse subjects as beet sugar, dyeing, called printing and fertilizers. Sir Oliver Lodge is a high authority on wireless telegraphy and other matters. The other names are equally distinguished and show that England has at last waked up to the necessity of mobilizing the brains of the nation.

Argentine Wines.

Production of wine in Argentina is one of the most important industries of the country. In 1913 the record production of 110,000,000 gallons was reached. Practically all of the wine produced in Argentina is of a common variety, and is table use only. The exportation of Argentine wines is very limited.

BEST WAY TO WINTER GERANIUMS

By EBEN REXFORD.

The question is asked, "How can geraniums be wintered in the cellar?" in two ways: First, in pots. Second, by hanging them up by the heels, so to speak.

Neither way is absolutely sure to bring them through in good condition. But either way may prove successful, therefore it is advisable to try both. If one has fine varieties he would like to save for next summer. If one falls the other may prove successful.

To winter them in pots the plants should be crowded into as small pots as will contain them, and then the tops should be cut away so that all that remains of the summer's growth is a few stubs at the base of the plant.

Do not try to encourage any growth after potting. Set them away in a cool but frost-proof place and keep them there as long as it is safe to do so. Then put them in a cool cellar.

The soil in the pots should be quite dry when they go into cold storage, and it should be kept in that condition, as nearly as possible, all through the winter. Not really dry, of course, but with only a hint of moisture in it—so little, indeed, that it would seem dry when compared with ordinary soils.

The aim is to keep the plants as nearly dormant as possible, and this cannot be done if they are moist at the roots. Heat also encourages growth, and the absence of it has a tendency to keep the plants at a standstill.

Treated as advised above, it is possible to bring geraniums through the winter in such a condition that they begin to grow as soon as brought to the light and warmth of the sitting-room after being watered.

The necessary conditions, you will observe, are dryness of soil and a low temperature. It is less work to make the plants free from the soil they have grown in during the summer and simply hang up the mass of roots in the cellar. This should not be done immediately after lifting the plants, however.

This method makes it necessary for us to leave them in the ground as long as possible, well up to cold weather. In fact, for if they were to go into the cellar while the temperature was high, growth would be almost sure to begin.

Therefore the plants must be left in the ground and protected from frost until about the first of November, if possible. Then lift them on a warm day and spread the roots out in the sunshade, after first cutting away all the top.

Cover well at night and expose them next day if the weather is favorable. Do not put them in the cellar until all the soil adhering to the roots has become so dry it can easily be shaken off.

Then tie a string to each plant and suspend it about midway between floor and ceiling. Do not place them on the floor, for there it is likely to be too damp, nor close to the ceiling, for there it is likely to be too dry.

While the geranium does not have a tuberous root, like the dahlia, it has a fleshy root which enables it to store up enough moisture to supply its needs for a long period.

If one has a room in the house where plants can be kept safely, I would advise taking cuttings from each choice variety early in the fall. Root these in sand and put them into small pots as soon as the cuttings begin to grow.

This gives you a third method of keeping desirable plants over winter and will generally prove successful when the other two fail.

Those who live in the vicinity of a greenhouse can get their plants stored there at little expense, and I would advise this whenever possible.

But, lacking this facility, don't fail to try the methods recommended above if you have choice varieties that you do not feel sure of being able to duplicate next season. When one gets a fine variety it's worth while to hang on to it.

PROTECTING BULBS

The bulb bed ought to be covered with six or eight inches of coarse manure or hay. This will not keep the frost from penetrating the soil, where the bulbs are, but it will prevent the sun from thawing it out. In other words, the soil once frozen will remain in that condition.

It is the alternation of freezing and thawing which does the damage, not the freezing, as many persons think. Alternations of these conditions rupture the tissues of the plants.

Let the ground become frozen, and stay so, and the bulbs will not be injured by heaving of the soil. If they freeze and thaw and freeze and thaw again, and this process is kept up, as it is likely to be in an unprotected bed, they are torn loose from their tender roots and great harm is done. Leaves, if you can get enough of them, make an excellent covering for the bulbs.

create shelter and warmth, and the dark-green foliage tends to make a place cheerful.

The best laurels are Arbutus (round leaved) and Laurel.

These are harder than the common laurel, which suffers in very extreme climates.

TAKE SALTS TO FLUSH KIDNEYS IF BACK HURTS

Says Too Much Meat Forms Uric Acid Which Clogs the Kidneys and Irritates the Bladder.

Most folks forget that the kidneys, like the bowels, get sluggish and clogged and need a flushing occasionally, else we have backache and dull misery in the kidney region, severe headaches, rheumatic twinges, torpid liver, acid stomach, sleeplessness and all sorts of bladder disorders.

You simply must keep your kidneys active and clean, and the moment you feel an ache or pain in the kidney region, get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any good drug store here, take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salt is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and is harmless to flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to normal activity. It also neutralizes the acids in the urine so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is harmless; inexpensive; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which everybody should take now and then to keep their kidneys clean, thus avoiding serious complications.

A well-known local druggist says he sells lots of Jad Salts to folks who believe in overcoming kidney trouble while it is only trouble.—Adv.

Gently cleanse your liver and sluggish bowels while you sleep.

Get a 10-cent box.

Sick headache, biliousness, dizziness, coated tongue, foul taste and foul breath—always trace them to torpid liver; delayed, fermenting food in the bowels or sour, gassy stomach.

Poisonous matter clogged in the intestines, instead of being cast out of the system is re-absorbed into the blood. When this poison reaches the delicate brain tissue it causes congestion and that dull, throbbing, sickening headache.

Cascarets immediately cleanse the stomach, remove the sour, undigested food and foul gases; take the excess bile from the liver and carry out all the constipated waste matter and poisons in the bowels.

A Cascaret to-night will surely straighten you out by morning. They work while you sleep—a 10-cent box from your druggist means your head clear, stomach sweet and your liver and bowels regular for months. Adv.

Bumper Grain Crops

Good Markets—High Prices

Prizes Awarded to Western Canada for Wheat, Oats, Barley, Alfalfa and Grasses

The winnings of Western Canada at the Soil Products Exposition at Denver were easily made. The list comprised Wheat, Oats, Barley and Grasses, the most important being the prizes for Wheat and Oats and sweep stake on Alfalfa.

No less important than the splendid quality of Western Canada's wheat and other grains, is the excellence of the cattle fed and fattened on the grasses of that country. A recent shipment of cattle to Chicago topped the market in that city for quality and price.

Western Canada produced in 1915 one-third as much wheat as all of the United States, or over 300,000,000 bushels.

Canada in proportion to population has a greater exportable surplus of wheat this year than any country in the world, and at present prices you can figure out the revenue for the producer. In Western Canada you will find good markets, splendid schools, exceptional social conditions, perfect climate and other great attractions. There is no war tax on land and no conscription.

ANURIC!

The Newest Discovery in Chemistry

This is a recent discovery of Dr. Pierce, who is head of the Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute at Buffalo, N. Y. Experiments at Dr. Pierce's Hospital for several years proved that there is no other eliminator of uric acid that can be compared to it. For those easily recognized symptoms of inflammation—as backache, scalding urine and frequent urination, as well as sediment in the urine, or if uric acid in the blood has caused rheumatism, it is simply wonderful how surely "Anuric" acts. The best of results are always obtained in cases of acute rheumatism in the joints, in gravel and gout, and invariably the pains and stiffness which so frequently and persistently accompany the disease rapidly disappear.
